

Intel Corporation Responsible Business Alliance (RBA) Commitment Letter, 2024

As a co-founder, full and active Member of the Responsible Business Alliance (RBA) with representation on the RBA Board of Directors, Intel Corporation (Intel) fully supports the vision and goals of the RBA within our global operations. At Intel, we align our global operations with and vigorously implement the RBA Code of Conduct. We actively encourage and support our supply chain to conform to these expectations. Since our initial commitment to implementing the RBA Code of Conduct in 2004, Intel has led targeted initiatives and collaborated with peers and stakeholders to drive change and achieve success in expanding due diligence efforts across the electronics industry's value chain. Intel's commitment and executive support enables us to achieve real results in our supply chain and beyond. Intel goals and progress are transparently reported in our annual Corporate Responsibility Report and our annual Statement on Combatting Modern Slavery and ensuring Transparent Supply Chains. Many of the RBA Code elements are also included within our Human Rights Principles.

Conformance to the highest standards helps create better social, economic, and environmental outcomes for all those in the Electronics and ICT supply chains which includes increased efficiency and productivity for customers and suppliers, improved conditions for workers, economic development, and a cleaner environment for local communities. Through the RBA shared approach, Intel can reduce duplication, focus efforts on positive social and environmental change, build supply chain capabilities in social responsibility and employ processes that solicit feedback from stakeholders.

We believe that a coordinated and consistent approach within our industry, coupled with Intel's executive support and commitment, holds the greatest promise for performance improvement. Intel will maintain our commitment to regulatory and legal compliance, in part by implementing the RBA approach and tools.
